 - 12 The African American Regional Performance Index examines several of the housing, economic, social and education conditions of Blacks at the metropolitan level. The performance index is calculated along the following indicators: Education, Household Economic dynamics, Regional Employment & Economic characteristics, Family, Children & Youth, Neighborhood conditions, Wealth characteristics, Mobility and Housing conditions. A total of 21 variables are used to identify the relative position of the thirty-two regions in the U.S. that contains a significant portion of African Americans. The results were compared between regions, based on categorical and overall performance. The findings highlight the relationships, direction and depth of racial disparity within metropolitan areas along the above indicators. (The full list of variables used are included in the appendices of the full report).

- 44 The Dissimilarity Index is a measure of residential segregation. On a scale of 0 to 1, with 1 representing complete segregation between two groups, and 0 representing complete integration, rankings of .6 and above are considered to be highly segregated. A ranking of .6 means that 60% of one group would have to move to a different census tract in order for the two groups to be equally distributed throughout a geographic area.

- 394 Overall, the arrests for violent crime were nearly even, however, when looking at specific crimes blacks accounted for 60 percent of murders and 39 percent of rapes. Conversely, whites accounted for 60 percent of arrests for rape and 39 percent for murders. With regard to property crime Whites are arrested over twice as much for burglaries (67%) and larcenies (72%), and over three times as much for arsons (75%) compared to blacks. When comparing racial difference in drug arrests blacks constitute 39 percent while whites make up 60 percent of all arrests for drug offenses
